FACTORS IN SUCCESS. "The experiment station has made a test of every method known and we that enter into the most approved system of growing wheat. These are rotation of crops, fertilization of soil, better preparation of seed bed, heavier seeding, better drainage and using better seed.

"These are the things we have used in our fields and our crops have proved their value. They are not high-flown improvements that the farmer will scorn. They are only sane and serviceable.

"The farmers of Ohio now rank fourth among those of the different states of the union. They can be first if they want to be by following our methods: "In our rotation system we plant wheat, oats, corn and clover in successive years and thus rest and renew the soil.

"The fertilization consists of using good commercial fetilizers continuovely on the ground and making special use of phosphorus with perhaps a little potassium.

PLANT MORE SEED.

"Heavier seeding is the one thing that must be impressed on the farmer's mind. The station has proved no less amount than eight pecks of seed should be used to an acre.

"Better drainage can be gotten by putting more tile drains under the ground.

"Better varieties of seed should be chosen because of their superior yield. "The doubling of the wheat yield in Ohio means at least $30,000,000 more in the pockets of our citizens."
